

Parker Hau

Proprietor, Grasshopper Acres

International applications liaison, Greenetics International

You've done it. Today is your crowning moment of triumph.

You are Parker Hau, undercover agent for the United States Food and Drug Administration. Acting on the orders of your three-letter agency, you have infiltrated the GEMINI program of Greenetics. It was easy: all you had to do was pretend to be a farmer in northern California. Soon enough, you received a non-disclosure agreement and an offer to buy your farm for millions.

You hadn't been actually growing any vegetables, but that didn't seem to particularly matter to Greenetics. They let you in on all their corporate secrets in exchange for promises to secretly market their products under your farm's name at the local farmer's market.

Today, you're going to take down their dirty little empire. You've heard that they have been developing vegetables that covertly alter the psyches of people who eat them. If you can find someone willing to testify with evidence to that effect, you can get them into the Witness Protection Program, and then you can take these bastards to court.

But first, you have to survive yet another Saturday at the Farmer's Market. Ugh.

What You've Got

- A white panel van - parked a block away.
- A radio with an uplink to the US Marshals as well as FDA agents - in the van.
- A key - opens your van.